Course overview

How do you develop leaders and teams for a world you can't control?

Traditional human resource (HR) and leadership frameworks struggle to keep pace with today's realities. This session offers a new lens on human development as the foundation of business adaptability.

Key topics covers include:

- The hidden drivers of burnout, disengagement, and talent waste
- Why standard leadership pipelines fail in complexity—and what works instead
- From workforce planning to capability ecosystems: building for continuous development
- Decision-making autonomy, adaptive capacity, and systems thinking at every level
- Tools you can use now: Role architecture, self-organizing teams, and designing for requisite complexity

Benefits of attending

By attending this session you will:

- Learn about the hidden drivers which might be sabotaging your business
- Understand how to build a workforce for continuous development
- Examine how decision-making autonomy and adaptive capacity can affect your business
- Gain tools to encourage self-organising teams

Who should attend?

This session will be of particular benefit to:

- Chief executives & business founders
- Company directors, board members & chairs
- Compliance officers and professionals
- HR professionals & people leaders
