Overview

Business managers and leaders regularly speak at client meetings, team briefings, project presentations, and external conferences. In fact, anywhere you engage verbally with colleagues or clients can be considered a 'speech' in as much as what you say and how you say it creates an impact and impression. The objective in all cases should be to engage, inspire and influence the audience.

However, for most people speaking to any audience is both challenging and daunting. Get it right and they are uplifted and motivated, with the key take-away messages clearly delivered. Get it wrong and they leave deflated and confused.

The ability to deliver a successful presentation involves three key elements:

- Content
- Delivery
- Connecting with the audience

In the second session of Dr David Bryon's exciting new lunchtime series on powerful presentations and confident public speaking session, attendees will look at the techniques that professional presenters, speakers, politicians & even comedians use to maximise the delivery of their content. It will include insights into how the voice, body movements, and facial expressions help to engage audiences and build momentum to deliver the key messages and audience take-aways. The session will include looking at video-clip examples of different delivery techniques.
