Overview

Business managers and leaders regularly speak at client meetings, team briefings, project presentations, and external conferences. In fact, anywhere you engage verbally with colleagues or clients can be considered a 'speech' in as much as what you say and how you say it creates an impact and impression. The objective in all cases should be to engage, inspire and influence the audience.

However, for most people speaking to any audience is both challenging and daunting. Get it right and they are uplifted and motivated, with the key take-away messages clearly delivered. Get it wrong and they leave deflated and confused.

The ability to deliver a successful presentation involves three key elements:

- Content
- Delivery
- Connecting with the audience

In the third and final session of Dr David Bryon's exciting new lunchtime series on powerful presentations and confident public speaking session, attendees will look at how professional presenters, speakers, politicians and even comedians are able to build a connection with audiences and therefore maximise the content being delivered. It will include a summary of the content and delivery sessions, adding that final connection component. The session will also include looking at video-clip examples of different techniques that presenters use to engage with audiences and ensure their messages are believable and delivered with maximum impact.

Benefits of attending

- Learn how to build strong connections with your audience
- Understand how connection enhances content and delivery
- Review and consolidate key presentation skills from previous sessions
- Discover techniques presenters use to engage audiences authentically
- See video examples demonstrating effective audience engagement
- Increase credibility and believability in your presentations
- Maximise the impact and memorability of your key messages
- Gain confidence in delivering presentations that inspire and influence

Who should attend?

- Business managers
- Team leaders
- Project managers
- Client-facing professionals
- Anyone regularly speaking in meetings or presentations
- Professionals seeking to deepen audience connection
- Individuals aiming to deliver credible and impactful messages
- People wanting to maximise the overall effectiveness of their presentations
